Biography Rob Greenall is a registered veterinarian who has worked for over 20 years in private practice and various roles in the public sector. Comfortable in roles from the farm to the boardroom, he is well known for his can-do attitude and high quality outputs.

Rob has a Masters degree in Veterinary Studies specialising in dairy cattle medicine and production. He has initiated and led over 30 separate research and extension projects since 2000, including a national dairy industry learning package (CowTime) and a national research and training organisation (National Milk Harvesting Centre). Rob is an experienced team leader with excellent personal skills. He is an excellent communicator and public speaker and has particular skills in all aspects of project management. Rob has demonstrated skills in leadership, problem solving and mentoring.

He is a popular choice for organisations that need a person with a sound science background to build a team and then deliver a project to exacting standards.
